LOVED PAPA'S COACHMAN

A Sensational Elopement at Yonkers, New York.

Frank of the Beautiful and Accomplished Daughter of Jay Gould's Confidential Secretary -- The Parents Crazed with Grief.

New York, Sept. 11.—P. J. Shelling, coachman of G. P. Morosini, at Yonkers, Jay Gould's private secretary, has eloped with Miss Victoria, Morosini's daughter, a young lady of twenty-three years, a blonde and handsome, and the greatest excitement prevails.

Shelling had been for some years in the employ of Mr. Morosini, but was discharged on the first of the month. He is of the same age of Victoria, and, like of her, is of light complexion. He is five feet nine inches in height, of slim build, with wavy brown hair. He wears a small mustache and side whiskers, is considered handsome and has a rakish air about him which made him popular with all the female domestics in Yonkers. The Morosini homestead is a large stone mansion, with beautiful gardens surrounding it, and the stables away in the rear, hidden by shrubbery. Shelling, who is a German, had full charge of the horses and carriages, of which his employer had the best in the town. About two weeks ago Mr. Morosini began to notice that Victoria was spending much of her time in the coachman's society.

She would frequently order her carriage and always insist on having Shelling act as her coachman. Then the other members of the family became suspicious, and told her father that it would be well to discharge Shelling, as he seemed to be making love to Victoria. Mr. Morosini then watched his daughter, and discovered Shelling with his arm around her waist, and was horribly surprised to see the girl made no resistance, and, in fact, rather seemed to court the attentions of the coachman. The old man rushed in between them, and there was an awful scene as he seized his daughter and ordered Shelling to leave the house immediately. The young man said nothing, but sneaked away. The love making occurred about ten days ago.

The following evening one of his fellow servants took his clothing, and it was supposed that he would leave Yonkers. He did not do so but loitered around the house and succeeded in seeing Victoria twice after that time. The first time he met her by the river bank, a short distance from the house, and was with her probably half an hour. A few days afterward he met her again in the garden as night was coming on. They were together then for over an hour, and it is supposed that during the conversation they made their plans for eloping. Chief of Police Mangin, on hearing of the elopement, immediately searched all the hotels and boarding houses of Yonkers, but without discovering any trace of the fugitives, when he became convinced that the pair had gone to a station a little above Yonkers and there taken the 8 o'clock train for this city. In fact, they were last seen about that time at a little station called Ludlow. During the evening Chief Mangin telegraphed to police headquarters in this city. Acting Inspector Copeland, who was then on duty, replied he could do nothing, even if he discovered the loving couple, for they were both of age.

There was no sleep in the Morosini mansion last night. When a reporter entered the grounds an hour after midnight, the whole house was lighted up. When the reporter rang, the door was opened by the youngest daughter, who was fully dressed. She acted like one insane—throw the door wide open and then slammed open the doors of the parlor to a seat in which she motioned the visitor. Mr. Morosini came down stairs in his night-clothing, accompanied by his eldest son, who stood by his side. Raising his hand the old man said, impetuously:

"What news! What news! Have you heard of her! Great God! I am heartbroken and her mother is upstairs dying."

He tottered for a moment and would have fallen in the broad corridor had not his son and daughter run forward and supported him.

"If I catch that rascal," he cried, "I will kill him as sure as there is a God above me." He then described the coachman, saying: "He has a head like a baboon and a sloping forehead. He was corpulent and filthy in habit and on the whole he was an unsightly person as one would care to see. I never suspected anything of the kind between him and my daughter. I have noticed that she was growing thinner, and two days ago I ascertained she visited my banker at Columbiana and asked him for $1,000. I did not know of that until to-day."

"Where do you suppose they have gone?" asked the reporter.

"I do not know. He has friends in Europe, and they may have taken passage there, or they may be on their way to the West where Shelling also has friends. He told me the name of the place but I have forgotten. Shelling has $700 or $800 in the Seaman's and the Bleeker Savings Banks, but I do not know whether he has withdrawn it. The arrangements for the elopement must have been planned some days ago. I do not think my daughter had very much money. She has always been liberally supplied with pin-money and may have saved some. You see she was a light-hearted and pure girl, fresh from the convent. She took none of her wardrobe except two plain dresses, which she wore, a diamond cross and earrings, and a pair of valuable coral drops are missing from her room."

Mr. Morosini gazed at the walls, which were covered with ancient armor and tapestry and cried out:

"The scoundrel once tried to kill me," and then the old man's wrath broke out afresh. "About two months ago Shelling met me at the station. He had a very bulky horse. Just as I was stepping into the carriage he deliberately whipped the horse. The animal started off and I fell to the ground, spraining my ankle. I will pay any sum of money, go to any expense or trouble but I will have my daughter and satisfaction from that scoundrel. The grief is almost killing my wife, and I scarcely know what to do myself."

Mr. Morosini has three daughters, of whom Victoria is the eldest. Her sisters are eighteen and thirteen years old respectively. The three girls are all said to be very lively, and are pupils at Mount St. Vincent's Academy, which is but a short distance from their father's house. Mr. Morosini goes very little into society, but his daughters with his two sons are on intimate terms with all the wealthy families. Their faces are familiar to all the townspeople, as their carriages and fine horses always attract attention and are seen every day in the streets and along the country roads. The people in the neighborhood who know Mr. Morosini say that it will go hard with Shelling should Morosini catch him, as the old gentleman is so very hot-headed that he will probably resort to violence should he lay his hands on the young coachman.

G. B. Morosini is an Italian, and has always claimed he came to this country as a refugee, accompanying Garibaldi and his wife. When Garibaldi resided in humble quarters on Staten Island, Morosini was his constant companion, and their friendship was of the most fraternal character. Morosini made his entrance in Wall street as a sort of office attendant of Jay Gould when the latter had a small room back of the Union Pacific Railroad offices on Nassau street. He was then working on a salary and acted as a body-guard to Mr. Gould. He made a great deal of money and had a happy faculty of keeping it, being regarded in Wall street as very close in all his dealings, public and private.

When Gould & Fisk had control of the Erie Road, Morosini assisted them, in return for which he was made Auditor, a position he held partly through the administration of John A. Dix as President of that road. When Mr. Gould desired to put his son George into business, he organized the present firm of Washington E. Connor & Co., and made equal partners of W. E. Connor, George Gould and W. P. Morosini, Jay Gould becoming a special partner, and giving the firm the benefit of all his vast speculative business. Connor & Co. have made a great deal of money, have been what is called in Wall street, "very lucky," and Mr. Morosini is believed to be worth between $500,000 and $1,000,000.

New York, Sept. 11.—Captain Mangin, of Yonkers, and two of his officers, Inspector Byrnes and half a dozen Central Office detectives scoured the city last night for Miss Victoria Morosini, the blonde daughter of Jay Gould's colleague, and her father's coachman, Shelling. To-day it was discovered they reached New York last evening and were married by a Baptist minister in East Fifty-first street. On the discovery of the marriage, Inspector Byrnes sent out the following general alarm to country-and the one sent last night:

"Victoria Morosini and P. J. Shelling are married, and cannot be arrested."

It is said Shelling is of noble birth, but poor. Miss Victoria met him first at Delmonico's, where he was waiter. The supposition is he went into Morosini's employ as coachman in order to be near the young lady. She has, it is said, a magnificent voice, and the probabilities are, unless Morosini takes them back, she will go on the stage as an opera singer, as she often desired.

It is said she had a thousand dollars worth of diamonds and jewelry when she fled. She had many suitors. She frequently went driving accompanied by Schilling. On account of his close attention to her he was discharged. She always defended him against the attacks of members of the family.

Murderer Betrayed by His Wife.

PERORA, Ill., Sept. 11.—Four years ago William Seward and Morrison Thompson, of Wyoming, Stark County, were known to be having trouble, and shortly after Thompson disappeared and has not been heard from since. A few days ago, Seward, while drunk, beat his wife, and she, while smarting from the effects, declared that Seward murdered Thompson at the time he disappeared and threw his body in an artesian well. Steamers are now pumping the well and it is expected they will find Thompson's bones at the bottom.

RAVAGES FROM CHOLERA

The Alarming Spread of the Epidemic in Italy.

Paule-Stricken Naples—Excitement Over the Report that Virgin Mary Had Descended into the City--The King Visiting the Sick.

NAPLES, Sept. 11.—During the last twenty-four hours there have been 700 fresh cases of cholera and 300 deaths in this city, and the town presents a gloomy aspect. Images of saints with acolytes bearing tapers have been borne at the head of processions of women through the principal streets, who invoked the help of the Virgin. A large crowd assembled outside the Church of San Genaro in consequence of a report that the Virgin Mary had descended upon the altar and bestowed her blessings upon the people. The doors of the church were closed and the crowd attempted to break them open. The troops arriving, however, the doors were opened and the multitude rushed in, fell upon their knees, and engaged in fervent prayers.

King Humbert, after visiting the poorer portions of the city, inspected the Christaline Hospital. He declined the use of disinfectants while making a tour of the wards in the hospital. The King was accompanied by his brother, the Duke of Aosta, a younger deprees, Minister of the Interior, and Signor Mancini, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The burial of the dead victims of the cholera is found to be very difficult, owing to the unusually large number so suddenly needing interment.

A soldier who was suffering from a violent attack of cholera was taken to the hospital, and in his delirium, threw himself from a window dying instantly upon the pavement.

King Humbert paid a visit late in the day to the Conocchia Hospital. An immense crowd attended upon the King, paying him an ovation as he proceeded through the streets.

Bonfires have been lighted throughout the city and disinfectants are freely used.

The workmen taken to the hospital in Rome yesterday showing symptoms of cholera, is expected to recover. Another suspected case was taken to the Lasaretto to-day and isolated.

The official bulletin showing the ravages of cholera in various portions of Italy for the past twenty-four hours is as follows:

Naples (City)	Fresh Cases	Deaths
(Province)	603	275
Bergamo	18	10
Benevento	15	10
Brescia	3	1
Campobasso	1	1
Caserta	23	4
Cano	19	12
Genoa	31	20
Massa Carara	1	0
Milan	2	0
Modena	1	1
Reggio De Emilia	2	1
Parma	7	6
Salerno	3	0
Turin	1	0
Total	764	341

The cases in Benevento and Salerno were of refugees from Naples. In Naples the condition is most harrowing. Scenes of misery and wretchedness of the most pitiable character occur on every side. King Humbert has been profoundly affected by the sufferings he has witnessed. He has made a fresh donation to the relief fund of $2,000.

LONDON'S CONDITION.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The official report of the City Sewers Commission which has just been published says that London was never cleaner or healthier or freer from nuisances than at present. If the cholera comes it cannot remain long nor assume alarming proportions.

MARSEILLES, Sept. 11.—Two fresh cases of cholera have developed to-day.

INOCULATION A FAILURE.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—Dr. Bossano, of the Pharo Hospital, of Marseilles, telegraphed last evening as follows:

"Drs. Reitch and Reitch have just informed me that several animals, which they inoculated with Dr. Koch's microbes, have died with choleric symptoms—results which Dr. Koch has himself failed to obtain. I am promised further details soon. Experiments meanwhile are being made at Naples, where the ravages of the pestilence each day are greater than during the worst period at Toulon or Marseilles. It has been demonstrated there that flies play an important part in spreading the disease."

EXCITEMENT IN MADRID.

MADRID, Sept. 11.—Considerable alarm was created to-day by the announcement that a child died from cholera within the city limits this morning.

PURSUED BY A SHARK.

A Bather Saved by the Well-Directed Blow of a Knife.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—About fifty young men were bathing in the Narrows, off the ferry dock at Stapleton, S. I., when a shark was suddenly seen making toward the group. The bathers made spasmodic efforts to get ashore and were soon out of danger, except Thomas Koehler, who did not hear the warning shouts. The shark turned and started toward Koehler. Its white belly flashed in the water when it was a few yards distant from the young man, who had been informed of his danger and was making for the wharf. It looked as if the shark would surely reach him before he could get out of the water. The shark and Koehler were on opposite sides of the pier, and among those on the wharf was John Taylor, formerly a driver for the Const Wrecking Company, where he had become familiar with sharks. Taylor hastily borrowed a sailor's sheath knife and ran out to the end of the pier in the path of the shark. As it came near the crowd saw that it was a monster more than eight feet long, and one of the shovel-nose species.

Taylor is a large man and an expert swimmer. As the shark swept up and was rushing toward Koehler, Taylor sprang from the pier with the sheath knife in his right hand. He jumped about eight feet before striking the water, and landed just beside the shark. The whole weight of his body was thrown on the knife, which he plunged as he touched the water into the shark's stomach. Instantly Taylor's arm, the water and the shark were almost hidden in blood. The shark made a terrible plunge, rolled over on its stomach, and when within three feet of Koehler turned and disappeared in the deep water.

Taylor swam ashore without the knife. "I left it sticking in the cuss," he said. "The carcass will be found in a couple of days. I have seen the natives in Florida and Bermuda often kill sharks in this way. When a shark turns on its back, which it has to do to bite anything, it cannot turn its course easily, because the eyes are under. There is no danger so long as a man jumps behind the head and does not get struck by the tail. I cut a gash in that fellow almost one foot long and six inches deep."

RIOTING POLANDERS

Who Refused to be Arrested for Beating a Peddler.

MONTANA, Pa., Sept. 11.—A clothing peddler, who visited this place last month and took a large order for clothing among the Slaves and Polanders returned yesterday to deliver the goods. The purchasers demanded a pair of suspenders with each pair of trousers, and finally drove the peddler out of the village, after giving him a good beating. He returned last night with reinforcements and warrants for his assailants. Three Slaves were arrested, and as they were being led away their countrymen and the Poles set upon the officers and rescued the prisoners. A general riot ensued in which three of the residents were probably fatally injured. Their names are unpronounceable. Most of the rioters are hiding in the woods.

UNPROVOKED MURDER.

Young Man Shot Down Without Warning—Prospective Lynching.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Sept. 11.—At 2 o'clock Wednesday night Thos. Quinlan, a rough, approached Eugene Connelly, a young man who was sitting on the street corner, and without saying a word, shot the latter in the left breast. Quinlan was at once arrested and jailed. A short time afterward a mob was organized to lynch Quinlan, but prompt action of the police frustrated the intention. Members of the mob say they will yet lynch Quinlan. The cause of the shooting is not understood, as nothing had ever passed between the parties. Quinlan was released from jail only on Sunday night after serving a sentence for assault. Connelly will die.

AN APPLE CUTTING

That Wound Up in a Riot and One Death.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 11.—News has reached here of a serious riot which occurred near Fairplay, Polk County, last Saturday night. A large crowd of young folks had assembled at the widow Duncan's to attend an apple cutting. In the midst of the festivities two young men got into an altercation when James Reid went to the assistance of one of them. Another outsider, William Bayless, then attacked Reid. The latter used a slingshot, whereupon Bayless drew a large jack-knife and cut him in several places and stamped him with his feet. Reid died from his injuries in about an hour. Bayless gave himself up to the authorities at Fairplay Monday.

SPOILING FOR A FIGHT.

An Excuse for the Umatillas to Don the War Paint.

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 11.—Since the lynching of the Indian at Cheney, in Washington Territory, for brutally outraging a white woman a few days ago, the Indians of that region have been very sullen and insolent toward the whites. They all claim that the victim was entirely innocent of the heinous offense. Many Indians are adorning themselves with war paint, and serious trouble is feared. The lynched Indian belonged to the Umatillas, which tribe has long hated the whites and been anxious to have provocation for a fight.

"NOT GUILTY"

Is the Plea Left by the Dead Bank President.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Sept. 11.—The following notice was found in Mr. Runyon's pocket after his death:

"TO ALL CONCERNED: I have never taken one dollar from this bank, except the overdraft, without giving a good indorser at the time, or security for the full amount of loan at that time."

The dead man's friends hail the announcement with triumph. It is thought the "overdraft" he refers to is a joint note for $25,000 issued by himself and Hill, which is all that is reported so far to be not covered by collateral.
